

the kingdom of God

we have been led to believe that the kingdom of God is a place atop the skies; a place in a different dimension, where no harm may come, where evil does not exist, where the virtuous and non-sinful rest with their loved ones for eternity.

but the kingdom of God may be one of the most harmful misinterpretations in religion, for it creates the false belief that life, at its best, happens elsewhere;
not here, not now, but somewhere else;
somewhere in which only the sinless may access.

is hell then a mistake of God's creation? does anything ever happen that God does not intend? is it possible that maybe, we have misinterpreted the kingdom of God?

what if the kingdom of God is not a place atop the skies, but rather, a state of consciousness?
a state of being, now, in the present.
an all encompassing, all loving, all accepting state of living.

life at its best does not happen elsewhere, but here, now, in God's only kingdom:
the present.

all kingdoms that do not occur in the present are illusions of the mind.

and besides,
a place where everything happens as your survival-driven ego desires, sounds much more like a hell, than a heaven.
